Welcome to the 2014 Inside the FBN preseason projections.

The new single division NL and AL format make projecting it challenging...plus further parity seems to be occurring. I attribute this to less dumb ass draft picks due to more available information. Whatever you attribute it to, there are definitely less crappy teams than there have been in prior years. In addition, the good teams have flaws. This goes for both the AL and NL. I see only a few really bad teams and the good teams are all flawed....no juggernauts this year....at least not yet. You never know if someone starts trading the future away.

I'll start with the NL. I'm not going to talk about all of the teams. That gets a little redundant. Bottom line is a lot of teams are close. I think Norwich, Hazardville, Taxachusetts, Wall Street and US will make the playoffs. You can look at the lineups and rotations and see that no one team is clearly better than the rest. Enjoy the season. Should be a very competitive year.
